The article offers an important perspective on the beach. However, this approach has already been extensively developed in social science studies on space and its social/cultural character. The text seeks to introduce a discussion on materiality, but does not develop it, which could have added originality. In any case, a particularly important point of the work is the "conversion" of street vendors from the city to the beach (from one commercial circuit to another). This process is not the core of the article, but it nevertheless condenses data and analyses that contribute to the central argument.
